次は、中学生の健太（Kenta）と留学生のエマ（Emma）の対話です。（“A Welcome Party”）

Emma: Hi, Kenta. What are you doing?

Kenta: Hi, Emma. I'm making a poster for the welcome party. Some new students from Australia will arrive next Monday.

Emma: That sounds fun. What are you going to do at the party?

Kenta: We're going to sing a Japanese song together and show them some calligraphy. But I'm worried. The song is a little difficult for people who don't know Japanese.

Emma: Then why don't you write the words in English letters on a big sheet of paper? When I came to Japan, I couldn't read Japanese, so that kind of help made me happy.

Kenta: That's a great idea! I'll ask my classmates to help me write them.

Emma: Can I join you? I can tell you which words are hard to read.

Kenta: Of course. Thank you, Emma. Let's start after school tomorrow.

Mika: At nine. We'll take the train from Minami Station. It takes about forty minutes.

Ben: OK. Is there anything I should bring?

Mika: You don't need to bring lunch. The museum has a restaurant, but it's a little expensive, so my mother is going to make sandwiches for all of us. Just bring some money for the train.

次は、中学3年生の陸（Riku）が英語の授業で行ったスピーチです。（“My Homestay in Canada”）

Hi, everyone. Last August, I stayed with a host family in Canada for two weeks. I want to tell you about one important thing I learned there.

On the first day, my host mother asked me, "What do you want to eat for dinner?" I didn't know what to say, so I just answered, "Anything is OK." She looked a little sad. Later, my host brother told me, "In our family, we like to hear what you want. Please tell us your ideas."

After that, I tried to say my opinions, even with simple English. I told them I wanted to try Canadian food, and they took me to a market. I also cooked miso soup for them. They loved it and asked me how to make it.

Through this experience, I learned that sharing my ideas is the first step to understanding each other. In Japan, I sometimes stay quiet in class, but now I want to say what I think. Thank you for listening.

問2 次の各問いに答えなさい。

次の英文を読んで、あとの問いに答えなさい。（“Design for Everyone”）

Have you ever seen a shampoo bottle with small raised lines on its side? These lines help people who cannot see well. They can tell the shampoo from the conditioner just by touching the bottle. This is an example of universal design.

Universal design is the idea of making things that are easy for many people to use. It is not only for people with disabilities. For example, a door that opens automatically is useful for people in wheelchairs, but it also helps people who are carrying heavy bags or pushing strollers.

Universal design can be found in many places around us. Some cups have large handles, so children and older people can hold them easily. Some signs use pictures instead of words, so people from other countries can understand them.

When we design something, we should think about many different users. If we do so, we can make a society where everyone can live comfortably.

次の英文を読んで、あとの問いに答えなさい。（“Small Workers in Our Food”）

When you eat an apple or a strawberry, do you think about bees? Bees are small, but they play a big role in making our food.

Bees visit flowers to collect nectar, a sweet liquid, and pollen. While they move from flower to flower, they carry pollen with them. This helps the plants make fruit and seeds. Without this help, many plants, such as apples, strawberries, and melons, cannot produce much fruit.

However, in some parts of the world, the number of bees is going down. There are several reasons. Some places have lost the flowers that bees need, and some chemicals used on farms can hurt bees.

What can we do? We can plant flowers in our gardens or at school. We can also learn more about bees and tell other people how important they are. Protecting bees means protecting our food.

問5　次の各問いに答えなさい。

次の英文を読んで、あとの問いに答えなさい。（“Small Pictures, Big Messages”）

Do you use emoji when you send messages to your friends? Emoji are small pictures such as smiling faces, hearts, and food. They were first made in Japan for mobile phones, and now people all over the world use them. The word "emoji" is used in English, too. It comes from two Japanese words: "e" means "picture" and "moji" means "character."

Why are emoji so popular? One reason is that they help us show our feelings. When we talk face to face, we can see each other's faces and hear each other's voices. But in a short text message, it is hard to tell if the writer is happy or angry. A smiling face at the end of a message can show that the writer is friendly.

However, we should be careful when we use emoji. The same picture can have different meanings for different people. For example, some people use a certain face to show that they are laughing, but others think it shows that they are crying.

Emoji are useful tools, but they cannot say everything. When something is important, it is better to use clear words, too.

次の英文を読んで、あとの問いに答えなさい。（“Small Pictures, Big Messages”）

Do you use emoji when you send messages to your friends? Emoji are small pictures such as smiling faces, hearts, and food. They were first made in Japan for mobile phones, and now people all over the world use them. The word "emoji" is used in English, too. It comes from two Japanese words: "e" means "picture" and "moji" means "character."

Why are emoji so popular? One reason is that they help us show our feelings. When we talk face to face, we can see each other's faces and hear each other's voices. But in a short text message, it is hard to tell if the writer is happy or angry. A smiling face at the end of a message can show that the writer is friendly.

However, we should be careful when we use emoji. The same picture can have different meanings for different people. For example, some people use a certain face to show that they are laughing, but others think it shows that they are crying.

Emoji are useful tools, but they cannot say everything. When something is important, it is better to use clear words, too.

Have you ever seen a shampoo bottle with small raised lines on its side? These lines help people who cannot see well. They can tell the shampoo from the conditioner just by touching the bottle. This is an example of universal design.

Universal design is the idea of making things that are easy for many people to use. It is not only for people with disabilities. For example, a door that opens automatically is useful for people in wheelchairs, but it also helps people who are carrying heavy bags or pushing strollers.

Universal design can be found in many places around us. Some cups have large handles, so children and older people can hold them easily. Some signs use pictures instead of words, so people from other countries can understand them.

When we design something, we should think about many different users. If we do so, we can make a society where everyone can live comfortably.

I didn't want to stop playing games because they were fun. So I made a rule: I could play only after I finished my homework, and only for one hour. At first, keeping the rule was hard, but soon it became a habit.

On the first day, my host mother asked me, "What do you want to eat for dinner?" I didn't know what to say, so I just answered, "Anything is OK." She looked a little sad. Later, my host brother told me, "In our family, we like to hear what you want. Please tell us your ideas."

After that, I tried to say my opinions, even with simple English. I told them I wanted to try Canadian food, and they took me to a market. I also cooked miso soup for them. They loved it and asked me how to make it.

Through this experience, I learned that sharing my ideas is the first step to understanding each other. In Japan, I sometimes stay quiet in class, but now I want to say what I think. Thank you for listening.

When you eat an apple or a strawberry, do you think about bees? Bees are small, but they play a big role in making our food.

Bees visit flowers to collect nectar, a sweet liquid, and pollen. While they move from flower to flower, they carry pollen with them. This helps the plants make fruit and seeds. Without this help, many plants, such as apples, strawberries, and melons, cannot produce much fruit.

However, in some parts of the world, the number of bees is going down. There are several reasons. Some places have lost the flowers that bees need, and some chemicals used on farms can hurt bees.

What can we do? We can plant flowers in our gardens or at school. We can also learn more about bees and tell other people how important they are. Protecting bees means protecting our food.

次は、中学生の健太（Kenta）と留学生のエマ（Emma）の対話です。（“A Welcome Party”）

Emma: Hi, Kenta. What are you doing?

Kenta: Hi, Emma. I'm making a poster for the welcome party. Some new students from Australia will arrive next Monday.

Emma: That sounds fun. What are you going to do at the party?

Kenta: We're going to sing a Japanese song together and show them some calligraphy. But I'm worried. The song is a little difficult for people who don't know Japanese.

Emma: Then why don't you write the words in English letters on a big sheet of paper? When I came to Japan, I couldn't read Japanese, so that kind of help made me happy.

Kenta: That's a great idea! I'll ask my classmates to help me write them.

Emma: Can I join you? I can tell you which words are hard to read.

Kenta: Of course. Thank you, Emma. Let's start after school tomorrow.

次は、中学生の美香（Mika）と留学生のベン（Ben）の対話です。（“Plans for Saturday”）

Mika: Hi, Ben. Do you have any plans for Saturday?

Ben: Not yet. Why?

Mika: My family is going to the science museum in the city. My mother said I could bring a friend. Do you want to come with us?

Ben: I'd love to! I've wanted to visit that museum since I came to Japan. What time are you going to leave?

Mika: At nine. We'll take the train from Minami Station. It takes about forty minutes.

Ben: OK. Is there anything I should bring?

Mika: You don't need to bring lunch. The museum has a restaurant, but it's a little expensive, so my mother is going to make sandwiches for all of us. Just bring some money for the train.

Ben: Wow, that's very kind of her. Then I'll bring some cookies for everyone. I made them with my host mother last week, and they were delicious.

Mika: Great! See you at the station at a quarter to nine.
