Article

Should libraries replace paper books with e-books? In a recent survey of 500 high school students, over 60% of the respondents said they read e-books on their phones. E-books are convenient: you can carry hundreds of them in one device.

However, paper books still have strengths. Some readers say it is easier to remember what they read on paper, and many people simply enjoy turning pages.

Rather than choosing one, libraries should offer both. That way, every reader can choose the style that suits them best.
